Why They Were Generous

By M. MONROE JAMES.
Copyright, 1908, by American Press Association.

In 19— I was invited to make a Memorial day address in my native town of Eastport. When the exercises were over I wandered among the tombs, watching the friends who were bestowing fragrant tokens of remembrance over the ashes of their dead.

I was standing beside a grave which was literally covered with choice flowers when my friend C. joined me. "Those people are generous," I said, pointing to the flowers strewn about the grave and indicating a gentleman and lady who had just left it.

"They have reason to be," he answered.

That evening he told me the story: For a time it was difficult to guess which of the rivals for the hand of Cora Dixon would carry off the prize, for she seemed equally gracious to Fred Nevius and Geoffrey Burns.

There was one intensely interested spectator, who, had the question been left for her decision, would have settled it easily. To Cora's mother money was the key to all things desirable, and as Burns had an abundance of the commodity, while Nevius was but indifferently provided, she wondered at her daughter's indecision.

But Cora was unlike her mother, and when the supreme test came to her she did not let the superior financial advantages of one lover outweigh the fact that her heart had gone into the keeping of the other.

Scarcely had the story of Fred's good fortune become known when the town was startled by strange news. The lover had forged his employer's name and had fled.

While the matter was being discussed elsewhere Cora was reading with tear wet eyes and agony of soul a letter from her accused lover.

"Dear Cora—When you get this I shall be far away, where I do not know. Fate is against me, but there is a God in heaven, I did not do the thing they charge against me. I shall love you always, but of course you are free from any promise to me. Unless I can clear my name, I shall never return. I trust you will believe me, though I suspect the world will not. God bless you. Goodbye! Your unhappy friend, FRED."

The story was this: A check presumably drawn by Samuel Blake, his uncle and employer, was presented by the young man at the bank and cashed. Mr. Blake declared the check a forgery. Fred said it was received in a letter which stated it was a gift. Unfortunately the letter could not be produced. With an indignant denial he paid back the money and demanded to know if his uncle intended to prosecute. Receiving a negative reply, he left the store and, packing his belongings, left town without notifying any one of his destination.

As Cora faced the situation she saw that, as he had said, his explanation would not be accepted. She was worldly wise enough to know that, notwithstanding the maxim of the law to the contrary, public opinion is apt to adjudge an accused man guilty unless he can show his innocence. Her checks tingled as she thought of the covert sneers about that gift. Oh, if he had only kept that letter!

But what did it all matter? She knew he was innocent. Whatever the world might say, that was her verdict. This verdict she announced with quiet emphasis whenever the matter came to her attention, but she sadly saw that few stood with her; hence it did her a world of good to receive a note from Geoffrey Burns announcing his faith in her friend.

As time wore on Cora, bearing the double burden of her own desolation and her lover's shame, saw, with an added pang, how quickly the world forgets. Fred Nevius had been the idol of the social circle in which they had moved. Now he was as one who had never been.

So went a year. Then came an event which broke somewhat the dreary tenor of her life. David Nelson, a fellow employee, on his dying bed made a statement which wiped the blot from Fred's name. He said he sent the letter and check as an April fool jest, expecting to tell Fred of it before he could present it at the bank. When he saw it was likely to get him into trouble he became alarmed and held his peace.

Shortly after this disclosure Burns called on Cora and congratulated her on the clearing of her lover's name. "I cannot thank you enough for your loyalty to Fred," she said gratefully. "He was my friend, too," he answered.

Then he told her of having sent Nelson's confession to the papers of the large cities with the hope that the innocent man might see it.

Somewhat after this it seemed the most natural thing for Burns to call now and then. So went another year. Meanwhile a report came to Eastport that Nevius was dead. When Burns next called Cora questioned him about it.

"Yes, I have heard it," he answered gravely.

"Do you know what foundation it has?"

"There does not seem to be much that can be called foundation."

"Then you don't think it is true?"

He hesitated, dreading to give her the direct answer, which must come now.

"You don't think it is true?" she asked again.

"I fear it is," he said at last. Then he told her of a railroad wreck in a western state in which a young man answering Fred's description had been killed. On his linen they found the word Nevius. He told her also that he and Mr. Blake had put personal in the city papers all over the country, making inquiry for the missing man, but months had gone by and they had heard nothing.

"My heart says no," she replied only when he had finished.

Love cannot remain hidden. When Cora chose Fred Nevius, Burns had put his love away. But now, believing his rival dead, it had come back in greater volume. And so, though she ever put him aside, he sued persistently for her hand.

One day she told him if he would put like inquiries for Nevius in the papers again and in six months no tidings came she would give him an answer.

When the time was past and he falteringly reminded her of it she said: "Mr. Burns, you have been a true friend to me when such were very few. I respect you, honor you, but the love which you deserve is not mine to give. Living or dead, Fred Nevius still has my heart."

"I will be content if you will but say yes," he urged.

And thus the compact was made. Now that it was settled Burns begged for an early marriage, and, being abetted by Mrs. Dixon, Cora consented. Listlessly she did it as if it mattered not to her, as indeed it did not.

So in the days after Burns noted the same apathetic agreement with every suggestion from her mother or himself. It cut him to the heart, for, though counting it earth's choicest blessing to have her by his side on any terms, he could not escape the conviction that he was requiring too great a sacrifice of her.

One day when she was more than usually distraught he offered to release her. She told him that, while she could not give him what his truth and devotion deserved, she would be true to him if such was his desire.

"It is my heart's dearest wish," he answered fervently. "And love like mine must have its reward by and by. I will be true to you."

Deeply touched, even more by his tone than the words, she answered gently, "Geoffrey, I wish I might do more, but all that I can give shall be yours."

After this for his sake she strove to bring back some of her old time cheerfulness. And when she succeeded, as in part she sometimes did, his happy face paid her for the struggle. But when alone in her room, where she could be herself, her sore heart cried out against the fate which forced this hollow life upon her.

On the evening of the day before that set for her wedding she was sitting in a rustic chair on the lawn. Wrapped in the contemplation of her strange position, she did not know that a man was approaching her until he had called her name. As she turned she saw Fred Nevius, full of a hungry longing, met hers.

With a little cry of gladness she sprang up, and the next moment his arms were about her. How long they remained thus they could not have told, when they saw the grave eyes of Geoffrey Burns, not in anger, but full of unutterable sadness, resting on them.

Tearing herself from Nevius' clasp, Cora went to Burns and put her hand upon his arm.

"Forgive me, Geoffrey," she said humbly. "Forgive me. I forgot." Then, turning to Fred, she added, "Tomorrow night I am to be his wife."

Nevius recoiled as if she had struck him and, like one dazed, stood, with a dumb misery on his ashen face, looking from one to the other. At last he broke the painful silence.

"Great God!" he cried passionately, "did ever a man have such bitter fate? On a scrap of paper a few days ago I saw an account of the cruel jest which ruined my life. I hurried home, hoping to find what evil fortune had befallen from me. I thought I had, but, oh, my God!— His words ended with a gasp of despair, and, turning, he staggered away like one who had lost all hope.

Burns, watching them, saw that while Cora still kept her hand upon his arm her eyes followed the retreating form, and all her heart went with them.

Impatiently the guests, sitting in Mrs. Dixon's parlor, waited the coming of the bridal party. The groom had been with Cora fully half an hour, and the clock had announced the hour for the ceremony more than that long ago.

Presently it was whispered they were coming. The organist made ready, touching the initial chords. The clergyman took his place. All eyes turned on the door saw Geoffrey Burns come in alone.

The astonishment of the assembled company found expression in one smothered murmur. Then all grew silent as the chamber of death as they saw Burns was about to speak.

With a mighty effort to be calm, he began: "Friends, there will be no wedding tonight. I had thought that this hour would crown my life with the fulfillment of its fondest hope, but God wills otherwise. My love for Cora Dixon has not abated one jot, and she stands ready to make good her promise to be my wife. But he whom God hath joined to her is now returned, and though it leaves my life a barren waste, I have released her from her vow."

Shortly after Fred and Cora were quietly married. And the first news they had of the noble man whose sacrifice had made their union possible was that he had been killed in Cuba, and in his will he had left his property to Cora.

ALPINE GUIDES.

Some Are Experts In "Snow and Ice Work," Some In "Rock Work."

Some of the Alpine guides are experts in climbing. There are a number who are noted for their skill in what the Alpinist calls "snow and ice work." That means going up a peak which has so many snow fields and glaciers that its sides and summits may be nearly covered with them. The glacier guide can tell you all about "cornices"—snow masses which project from the edge of precipices and overhang the valley beneath like the roof of a house. Experience has told him whether a cornice can be crossed safely or whether it may break off on ventures upon it. He is also an expert with the ice ax carried in his belt, cutting footholds in the glittering walls that may rise fifty or a hundred feet above your head. These ice precipices are frequently found at the heads of glaciers, which, as the schoolboy knows, are merely rivers of frozen water slowly moving down the face of a mountain on account of the force of gravity and the great pressure of the ice masses which form their source on the upper part of the slope. Other guides make a specialty of "rock work," conducting persons up peaks which may be only partly covered with snow and ice, but having sides of bare rock so steep that in places the cliffs may be almost straight up and down. Here it would seem that one must be as spry and as sure footed as the chamois—the rare goat that lives up amid the Alps. While the crevasse and other dangers of the snow and ice fields may be absent, the mountain may be as abrupt, that the climber must ascend hundreds of feet pulling himself up with arms adding his legs, while often the guide hauls him to the top of the most difficult slopes by main strength. —St. Nicholas.

When the Famous Actor Fainted of Hunger in London.

Mansfield was taken to the Savage club, where his cleverness was attested by the leading entertainers of London. When Corney Grain was taken sick in the spring of 1877, Mansfield was at once recommended as his substitute in the German Reed entertainments. He was to receive £8 a week. This was a splendid salary for any young man as salaries went then or as they stand now on the London stage. To Mansfield it was a positive whiff of life.

As a member of this distinguished little coterie of entertainers Mansfield felt that his fortune was made. His whole interest, attention and hope now centered on April 20, the night of his debut. He was assigned the small role of the headle in the comedietta "Charity Begins at Home," which opened the evening. After that he was to change to evening dress and hold the stage alone for half an hour after the manner established by Corney Grain. Every shilling he could scrape together went for a wardrobe, linen, boots, cravat, a boutonniere and other irreproachable appurtenances.

His friends crowded St. George's hall for his first appearance. It was observed as he uttered the few lines of the headle that he was excessively nervous. When later in the evening he sat down at the piano and struck a preliminary chord he fainted dead away.

Mr. Reed relieved him of his position at once. In discharging him he said, "You are the most nervous man I have ever seen." It was not all nervousness, however. Mansfield had not eaten for three days. He had fainted from hunger.

It was many a year before he again worked up to the munificence of £8 a week, but this pathetic incident was later made an asset as employed by him in an attractive little comedy of his own writing—Paul Wiltach in Scribner's.

Iodine and Light.

If it is necessary to use iodine for painting the skin in medical treatment it is worth remembering that the painting should be done in the dark or in a red light such as is used in photography.

If this is done and the painted portion of the skin be covered without being exposed to white light it will not blister nor stain the flesh even if the painting is repeated a good many times.—New York Sun.

Deer.

Deer will eat almost any kind of grain or grass, even preferring the rank weeds to the choicest hay. They should always have an abundant supply of pure running water. About the greatest item of expense connected with raising deer is the cost of fencing. The fawns are usually born in the spring or early summer. Does, as a rule, have but one fawn at first, but subsequently twins are born and in rare cases triplets.—Kansas City Star.

British Army Intelligence.

An army order gave the following as the questions on which the inferior had to give an answer:

(a) Anniversaries only, or when specially required for salutary purposes. (b) On Sundays and anniversaries. (c) Daily.

—Punch.

Not Like Father.

"Do you think Mr. Skinnun's baby will take after its father?"

"Not at all. The other day they persuaded it to cough up a nickel it had swallowed."—Washington Star.

No man has ever by complaining of his ill luck induced others to have confidence in him.—Chicago Record-Herald.

H. H. GRANICE, Editor.

Unjustifiable Insinuations Against Sonoma Valley And its Good People.

THE election having become a thing of the past it was not the intention of the INDEX-TRIBUNE, who opposed J. K. Bigelow's Supervisorial aspirations, to allude to the matter again after he had been defeated at the polls by the votes of his fellow citizens. We considered the incident closed after the votes had been counted, and the result declared and supposed the defeated candidate possessed sufficient tact to retire to the privacy of his ranch and wisely maintain a dignified silence, as any sensible man would have done after suffering defeat at the polls as he did.

Not so with Mr. Bigelow, however, who, nine days after the election was over and ample time had elapsed to allow his angry passions to cool off again rushes into print in his hired mouthpiece, and makes the egregious blunder of attacking our naturalized Italian-American citizens and in fact every other voter who cast a ballot for Mr. Hart, in the following silly and uncalled-for language:

"In the first place I wish to say that I personally think Mr. Hart is not overjoyed with the kind of vote he received here, as I know him and have always found him personally to feel and talk on the side of decency, and I do not think that there is any doubt which way the great majority of the decent men of this valley cast their votes. I got the vote of but 5 saloon men in this valley out of 61 saloons. The Italian vote also went against me by a large majority 'for reasons' best known to their leaders, and I think it would be a good idea to look into this matter by men who have this valley's interests at heart."

Why these contemptible insinuations on the part of Mr. Bigelow against his Italian-born fellow citizens, many of whom are numbered among Sonoma Valley's most intelligent, progressive and prosperous people. They think and act for themselves and certainly showed excellent judgment in voting against a man who expresses himself as he does in the above quotation, which has aroused a feeling of resentment on their part against the disappointed, disgruntled and defeated Mr. Bigelow that bodes no good to him should he ever have the temerity to run for public office again.

Furthermore, Mr. Bigelow, claims by innuendo that all those who voted for him were the decent men of the valley while all those who supported Mr. Hart disgraced him by doing so. Now, in the name of common sense and decency what were Mr. Bigelow and his mouthpiece thinking about anyhow when the one wrote and the other published such drivel to be disseminated broadcast in an intelligent community?

Further on in this published "statement" of Mr. Bigelow's he does a previous injustice to our valley and its numerous summer resorts by insinuations which we must confess we do not care to reproduce in these columns for the purpose of argument, so for decency's sake we omit that part of his "statement." Suffice it to say, however, we consider the innuendo unjust and uncalled for and demand of him to specify which particular ones he alludes to.

In the concluding paragraph of his latest effusion, the disappointed Bigelow, who attempted to ride into office on a hot air wave of reform of his own creation, says:

"One more word and I am through for the present. If the people of any section of this valley will lay before me at any time direct evidence of continuous violations of the law by saloons (large or small) I will at my own expense, make a proper investigation and upon securing the necessary evidence, go before the proper authorities and see that their license is cancelled, and feel sure that the people of this valley can rest assured that Mr. Hart will vote justly on any such proposition if it be brought properly before him and the evidence is conclusive."

If the law is being violated by certain saloons in this valley as Mr. Bigelow insinuates in the above paragraph it is his duty as a good citizen to ferret out these violations, himself and make complaint, instead of suggesting that some one else go in quest of creations of his imagination. Go to it, Mr. Bigelow! Mount your pet hobby horse, and like Don Quixote of old, go forth and do battle with the windmills. This world of ours, with all the votes and that supervisorial chair, may yet be yours.

A DISPATCH received from Washington last Tuesday conveys the cheering news to our vineyardists and wine men that the recent ruling of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, that domestic sweet wines could not be used in compounding proprietary medicines, had been indefinitely suspended. This means much to the vinticulturalists of this State, who have millions of dollars invested in the vine and wine industry which is being menaced on all sides by long-haired calamity howlers, short-haired women of the Carrie Nation stamp and thirsty prohibitionists who are not averse to indulging in a glass of wine themselves but don't want other people to have any. This suspension of his former ruling by the Internal Revenue Commissioner, which should never have been made in the first place, will re-open a large outlet for our vineyard products which have been tied up for six or eight months at a heavy loss to the people of our State.

We publish elsewhere in these columns a tabulated official statement of the recent election returns for Sonoma county as given out by the Board of Supervisors. The returns are complete and accurate in every detail and the table should be preserved by our readers for future reference.

WARM AND DRY TO STAY WELL.

Advice of Noted Authority,
Also Gives Simple
Prescription.

Now is the time when the doctor gets busy, and the patent medicine manufacturers reap the harvest unless great care is taken to dress warmly and keep the feet dry. This is the advice of an old eminent authority, who says that Rheumatism and Kidney trouble weather is here, and also tells what to do in case of an attack.

Get from any good prescription pharmacy one-half ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion, one ounce Compound Kargon, three ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime.

Just try this simple home-made mixture at the first sign of Rheumatism, or if your back aches or you feel that the kidneys are not acting just right. This is said to be a splendid kidney regulator, and almost certain remedy for all forms of Rheumatism, which is caused by uric acid in the blood, which the kidneys fail to filter out. Any one can easily prepare this at home and at small cost.

Druggists in this town and vicinity, when shown the prescription, stated that they can either supply these ingredients, or, if our readers prefer, they will compound the mixture for them.

The Governor says, "a five thousand education grafted upon a hundred dollar boy produces no fruit." It's paternal pride that gives the world most of its spineless business men and unsuccessful preachers. The wish of the parent can no more make the boy a merchant than it can make him a preacher. There are lots of poor lawyers who would have made good farmers and there are lots of unsuccessful merchants who would have made good mechanics. Give a boy a year or two of hard knocks, he'll soon discover, and so will you, what he's fitted for—then give him the best education you can. ### $100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
Address F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
Sold by all druggists 75 cents.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Catholic Church Services.

Country Boys Wanted for Business Positions.

Business men of Oakland and San Francisco, and other large cities, want young men reared in the country to prepare for commercial positions. Experience has shown that the average boy from the farm has habits of industry and integrity that make for success.

The Polytechnic Business College of Oakland, Cal., has made a phenomenal record in training and placing young men and women in business positions, and the College is so located as to provide homelike accommodations at very low rates.

It is said that every young man who has taken the complete course in business training at this College has received remunerative employment upon graduation.

An illustrated Catalogue will be sent free to any one who will write to Prof. W. E. Gibson, 306 Twelfth street, Oakland, Cal.

DR. EASTLAND HAS SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Slips on a Wet Pavement
During Short Vacation
in City and Breaks Right Hip.

Dr. O. Eastland, the well-known druggist of this place, while walking along one of the principal thoroughfares of San Francisco, on Thursday of last week, slipped on a wet pavement and struck the ground with so much force as to fracture his right hip. The doctor was taken to the Lane Hospital for treatment. On Sunday morning the surgeons of the hospital found it necessary to perform an operation on the patient in order to guard against serious complications setting in. The operation was successful and at latest accounts Dr. Eastland was getting along nicely.

Early last week Dr. and Mrs. Eastland left for San Francisco on a short vacation, the first in two years, and were looking forward to a little well-earned pleasure when the unlooked-for accident happened.

Mrs. Eastland returned home Friday morning, but her husband will not be able to leave the hospital for some little time, in the meantime his drug store will be in charge of Mr. Jas. W. Wigginton, an expert pharmacist from Petaluma.

The Hay Market.

Much speculation has been indulged in lately regarding a threatened shortage in the hay market. Somers & Co's weekly report from San Francisco is upon our table. It quotes choice wheat hay at from $20 to $22 per ton. Other grades vary between $11 to $18. The report says among other things: "There has been considerable discussion during the past week or two as to the amount of hay on hand in the State and more particularly in the country directly contributory to San Francisco. Although very accurate figures can be had as to the amount in public warehouses and approximately in private barns, yet it seems to be absolutely impossible to estimate what the demand will be, so at this early date it would seem as if it were idle to speculate on the eventual outcome. It is now definitely known that much aid can be offered by our surrounding States, so although we must admit that the future of the market will incline towards higher prices, yet we do not think any definite stand should be taken in this direction. We believe that for the moment all we can do is to await developments."

Death of a Young Wife and Mother.

Mrs. Paul B. MacQuiddy died at her home in Richmond, Contra Costa county, last Wednesday evening. The passing of Mrs. MacQuiddy was unexpected and sudden, the cause of death being hemorrhage of the brain, with which she was seized without warning while in the enjoyment of apparently good health.

The deceased was the wife of Paul B. MacQuiddy, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. MacQuiddy of this place. Besides a sorrowing husband the deceased leaves three little children, one a babe of two months, to miss a mother's love and attention. Mrs. MacQuiddy was a native of this State and 24 years of age.

The remains of the young wife and mother will arrive from Richmond, where the funeral services were held yesterday, on the S. P. train this morning at El Verano at 10 o'clock, from whence the funeral cortege will proceed to Mountain Cemetery in this place, where the remains will be laid to rest.

That City Hall Suit.

The demurrer in the suit of L. Quartaroli et al., vs. The City of Sonoma, was submitted in Judge Seawell's department of the Superior Court last Monday. This suit is one of the sequels to the building of Sonoma's new city hall, and was brought by Mr. Quartaroli and several other of our citizens to recover several thousand dollars, the value of a quantity of building material used in the construction of the building which it is alleged by plaintiffs belonged to them. The outcome of this suit will be looked forward to with interest by our citizens.

Thanksgiving Eve Ball.

The members of Sonoma Valley Council, No. 45, Y. M. I., are making great preparations for their twenty-second annual Thanksgiving eve ball, which will be held in Union Hall next Wednesday evening. These annual affairs of the Young Men's Institute always bring out the party-going people of the valley and indications point to the fact that their twenty-second annual will prove no exception to the rule.

The net proceeds of the ball will be donated for improving the Catholic cemetery grounds in this city.

Died in San Francisco.

Emil Sander, who bought the Theodore Skillman place near El Verano about eight months ago, died very suddenly at the Presidio General Hospital last Tuesday. Being an old soldier, Sander's, who had been ailing for some little time, had gone to the hospital in question for treatment. On Tuesday he burst a blood vessel and expired almost instantly. The deceased, who was about 63 years of age, leaves no living relatives in this country.

Insurance Rates Come Down.

Local insurance agents are in receipt of a circular letter from the Board of Underwriters of San Francisco notifying them that hereafter the 25 per cent which has been exacted for some time past on insurance policies in Northern California need not be added in the future. This means in reality a reduction of 20 per cent only on the old insurance rate. The reduction applies to all policies written since September 15th.

SLANG OF THE SAILOR

The Lingo That Is Used by Uncle Sam's Bluejackets.

MANY QUAINT EXPRESSIONS.

The Man-of-war's Man May Be a "Snowdigger" or a "Sloper," but He Uses the Language of Every Other Sailor.

There is a language that is neither English nor American, down east nor southern, western nor Yankee. It is just sailors' lingo.

No matter what part of the country may be the birthplace of a bluejacket or what his language at home, sooner or later he uses the language of every other sailor.

To the civilian a conversation between two bluejackets about his life on shipboard is hardly intelligible. The other day on the water front two sailors were overheard talking, says the San Francisco Bulletin.

"Oh, he's nothing but a beach combber. He was run up for breaking it once and got sent to the pie wagon," said one of them.

"I heard he got six months and a bob before he come here," replied the other.

A small boy standing near asked what all those things meant. The sailors were in a good humor and explained.

"Beach combber," said why, that's a fellow who hangs around a saloon ashore and never wants to work. "Breaking it" is staying overtime on shore, and "run up" is brought to the mast for offenses. The "pie wagon" is the place where they put prisoners, and "six months and a bob" is sentenced to six months in prison and given a dishonorable discharge.

There are many other terms and expressions that do not show their meaning on the surface.

A "rookie" is a recruit. A man who "ships over" enlists again. A man who is on the report for mast call is "down for a chance." Canned beef is known as "canned Willie," and a bottle of liquor is a "dog." All things lost on shipboard are put in a room called the "lucky bag." An honorable discharge is a "big ticket," and desertion by a sailor is "jumped." When the mail arrives on board and is ready for distribution "mail" is the cry which carries the news. A ship's carpenter is called "chips," a cooper'smith "coopers," a blacksmith "blacks," and the chief of the engineering department "the chief."

When a ship is traveling at sea it is "sailing," and if it hurries it is "making." A prison on shore is a "stone frigate." When a man is sentenced to a lower rating he is "busted," when he deserts and voluntarily gives himself up within a period of six months he is a "straggler," when he is sitting next the dealer in a friendly game of "draw" he is "under the gun," when he is continually quoting the naval regulations he has "swallowed the blue book," and when he thinks he knows more about the blue book than the captain he is a "sea lawyer."

"Pipe down" means in American slang "shut up." "Put in his oar" is "butt in." "Shove off, Jack," is a hint to move on. When a man is dishonorably discharged he gets a "straight kick." A sailor who draws more pay "draws more water." One who talks too much "blows off at a low pressure."

Wednesday afternoon, when the crew overhaul their clothing, is "rope yard Sunday." Any part of the United States is called "God's country," and the man from the eastern coast is a "snowdigger," while his brother from the west is called "sloper." The duty of calling the men in the morning falls to the master at arms, and he says "show a leg" or "rise up and shine." When a man has had no night watch and gets up in the morning with a good appetite it is "all night in and beans for breakfast."

One of the more familiar sea terms is "caught a crab," meaning caught an oar in the water. When a sailor has several enlistments to his credit he is called "a sea dog" or "an old salt."

A gentle hint from one sailor to another that he does not believe something which is being told to him is "tell it to a marine." To re-enlist is to "slip over," and when more than half the enlistment is in a sailor is "going downhill."

His Office Hours. Pat, a miner, after struggling for years in a western mining district, finally giving up in despair, went about to turn his face eastward when suddenly he struck it rich. Soon afterward he was seen strutting along, dressed in fine clothes. One day an old friend stopped him, saying: "And how are you, Pat? I'd like to talk to you."

Pat stretched himself proudly. "If you want to talk to me I'll see you in my office. I have an office now, and my hours is from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. in the afternoon." Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Crack or Break. Edwin and his mother went for a walk Sunday afternoon. Coming to a tree of cherries, the mother bent a low limb so that the little fellow could pick some. Seeing son's fine ones higher up, he begged to be allowed to climb the tree. "Oh, no," said his mother, "that would be breaking the Sabbath."

"And we are only cracking the Sabbath now, are we, mamma?" inquired Edwin. -Delicieux.

YOUR UMBRELLA.

A Simple and Effective Method of Marking It.

Name plates on the handle seldom assist in the recovery of even borrowed, to say nothing of lost, umbrellas. But there is a way by which you may so mark your umbrellas that the finders and borrowers thereof will be reminded of your name and address every time they stealthily sally forth with your umbrella over their heads. Make a paste of cornstarch with water; brush over the inner surface of the umbrella where you wish to have your initials or your name in full, either with or without your street address. When this paste is dry paint your name on the cornstarch, using pure white lead. Let the paint dry thoroughly; rub a stiff brush over the whitened surface until the cornstarch is removed.

You will thereupon find the white letters of your name standing forth immaculately against the black background of your umbrella cover. This cornstarch paste is applied to keep the name on the cornstarch, using pure white lead. Let the paint dry thoroughly; rub a stiff brush over the whitened surface until the cornstarch is removed.

An Error in Geography.

On one occasion the British lost a point in their war with Russia by reason of an error in their geography. This was when Commodore Elliot had succeeded in blockading the Russian fleet in the gulf of Saghalin, on the east coast of Siberia. The Russians were in a cul-de-sac, and the British ships waited contentedly for such time as the enemy should venture to put to sea. But they waited in vain, and at last an investigation was made. It was found that the Russian fleet had vanished. While the British commodore waited at the point, the Russian fleet, the Russian ships slipped away through the shallows at the north end into the sea of Okhotsk. -New York Tribune.

Hay on Church Floor. A curious custom is annually observed at Old Neston church on St. Swithin's day. The church is dedicated to St. Swithin, and on festival day the church is strewn with hay. Many years ago some donor left a field to provide money for bread which is distributed four times a year. The tenant of the field has to supply the hay to strew the church. The custom is supposed to have originated from the fact that on festival Sunday the parishioners wear new boots, and the idea of a donor was to have the hay laid down to stop the squeaking incidental to new footwear. -London Standard.

Ancient. "You never give credit for the jokes you print." "Well," responded the editor of the Punkville Palladium, "I don't know whom to give credit to. Noah failed to carry those records into the ark." -Louisville Courier-Journal.

His Apologies. Henry, aged three, was left alone with his three-months-old brother. His mother, hearing the baby cry, returned to find out what had happened. "Oh," said Henry, "I choked him a little, but I asked him to use me." -Delicieux.

Wholesale Wealth. "He is not rich as wealth is measured today." "Measured, eh?" murmured an elderly philosopher. "I guess that's a modern term. They used to count the money in the old days." -Philadelphia Bulletin.

The Bachelor's Button. "What is a bachelor's button?" "One that ain't there." -Cleveland Leader.

THE NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION OF WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY

Excels in Vocabulary. It is the most useful in size and contents, judiciously selected to exclude superfluous words of good usage, and to avoid unintelligible technicalities.

Excels in Arrangement. Each word begins a paragraph in its correct alphabetical place and is readily caught by the eye.

Excels in Etymology. These are complete and scientific, and embody the best results of philology. They are not scraps or crowded into obscure places.

Excels in Pronunciation which is indicated by respelling with the diacritically marked letters used in the schoolbooks, and by the phonetic alphabet.

Excels in Definitions which are clear, terse, yet complete, and are given in the order in which the word has acquired its shades of meaning. Many of the definitions are illustrated.

Excels in Its Appendix which is a packed storehouse of useful knowledge.

Excels as a Working Dictionary. No other book embodies so much useful information, or is so indispensable in the home, study, school, or office.

The International has 2380 quarto pages, 5000 illustrations, 25,000 new words, revised Gazetteer of the World, and a revised Biographical Dictionary, etc. It received

THE GRAND PRIZE (HIGHEST AWARD) at the World's Fair, St. Louis.

FREE--"A Test in Pronunciation," instructive and entertaining for the whole family. Also illustrated pamphlet.
